Enthusiasm fired by bucket brigade

By Suzanne Sproul

Dee Steele quietly and calmly set the pace.

"OK, one, two. One, two, ready, go," Steele belted out and the race began.

On one end of the 20-foot fire line stood Steele, dunking a five-gallon bucket of water into a tank. On the other end of the five-member line was Nancy Wright who had the wet and wild job of dumping the water into another large tank until a small white ping-pong ball popped out, signaling the end of the exercise.

And in between were Joan Case, her daughter, Shelly, and Arleen Blockburn, with arms swinging, rapidly passing the filled buckets down the line.

In the days of old, the speed in which the water buckets were handled could have made the difference between winning or losing a battle with a fire. Today it was just practice.
The members of the state

The members of the state champion bucket brigade, the Los Angeles County Firefighter's Auxiliary, Cinders, were getting in one more run before a weekend demonstration in Australia. The team was hoping for a g'day.

"We're looking forward to having a great time in Australia. We want to show them how buckets are done," Steele said, wiping a bit of perspiration from her forehead in between practice rounds at the Los Angeles County Fire Station 101 in Claremont. "Practice. That's all there is to this and a lot of coordination."

Coordination between the five women, which produced a run of 36.34 seconds last year in the state championships, is what helped them capture the title.

Competition, however, isn't really on their minds this time. The Cinders, their families and members of the California Firemen's Muster Association, all 92 of them, are in Australia for a couple of weeks to demonstrate bucket brigade techniques.

Although similar Australian teams compete in hose guard and ladder work contests, they don't participate in the bucket brigade portion.

brigade portion.

"Buckets are something they don't do there so we're going to leave 15 buckets there for them to get started with," Steele

"We were at the World Police and Fire Games in San Diego last August and some of the members of the association got to talking to some Australians who said it would be great if we could come down there and demonstrate," she said.

So after a series of conversations the trip was scheduled and now the local group already is planning to return to Australia next year to help celebrate the 100th birthday of the city of Melbourne.

"This will be a good chance for us to exchange ideas. We're hoping to make this some type of an exchange program in the future," said Ken Russell, muster association president.

Group members also are anticipating having a lot of fun Down Under, Russell said.

"We're really going to have fun and share a special camaraderie. It's also sort of fun that the bucket brigade was the first organized muster event when the buckets were leather and the team will be showing them how it's done," said Bill Stead, muster association member and chief of the Mt. Baldy Fire Department.

The muster association consists of members from 37 fire departments in the state who compete against each other with equipment and techniques from the 17th and 18th centuries in order to help preserve the history of the California fire service, Stead sald.

But the team and association members also will be collecting small gifts and toys from Australia. They will be donated to the Alisha Ann Ruch California Burn Foundation. "The kids need them, so that's enough," Steele said.

The Foothill Beverage Co. donated T-shirts and red, white and blue jackets to the team members.

"Everyone has been very supportive," she said.

The Cinders officially retired after winning the state championship, but the team agreed to make the demonstration in Australia.

Now team member Shelly Case is hoping to organize a new group of firefighter wives and daughters after she returns.

It's been a fun motherdaughter activity for the Cases.

Children are given much needed help through First Fund

Adrienne Gaines pushed a mass of papers from her desk and quoted a few figures.

"Of the 246,000 school-age children in San Bernardino County," she said, "over 80,000 live in poverty. County offices received over 16,000 reports of children being physically or sexually abused, and 3,000 children are currently receiving services from the county Department of Mental Health."

'Let's face it," she said. "The system is overtaxed. And the system is often its own worst enemy when it comes to helping abused children because of the lack of coordination betweeen these

Gaines is executive director of the First Fund of Children's Resources

In her office at the San Bernardino County Government Center, Gaines explained that the First Fund is a non-profit social service agency formed in 1986 by the county Board of Supervisors.

"It's the first of its kind in California," Gaines said.

The idea, she added, is to form a partnership between public, private-for profit, and non-profit sectors in order to raise money for needs not covered by usual departmental and state funding.

"As an example," Gaines said, "I know of a case in which

Red Hill roadway rerouting delayed

Neighborhood against realignment

By Lee Peterson

If the plan to reroute a section of Red Hill Country Club Drive hasn't been scrapped, it has at least been withdrawn for now.

Rancho Cucamonga's City Council is finally convinced that the issue is a tale of two cities.

And if the other city, Upland, wasn't upset enough about the plan to shift a street and plug it into their Grove Avenue, residents of the posh Red Hill neighborhood also have made known their resistance to the street change.

At least two of the three council members who voted in favor of the conceptual street switch last year now are making noises about there existing somewhere "a better idea.

Councilman Charles Buquet resurrected the Red Hill issue last week due in part to the "allenation on the part of Upland." He said he didn't feel anyone on the council was comfortable with the realignment when it was approved 3-2 in September last

Mayor Dennis L. Stout recommended last week that a private traffic engineer be hired to try to solve the problem which the city engineering staff has identified as a traffic safety hazard where the meandering drive empties into Foothill Boulevard.

Upland city engineer Fred
Blanchard said he would work along with the city of Rancho Cucamonga in their attempts to resolve the Red Hill/Foothill intersection problem.

Blanchard said Upland decided to construct a median island along Grove Avenue north of Foothill to obstruct left hand turns into and out of the new opening of Red Hill Country Club

He said the median decision was based upon the need for "traffic channelization" because the new street would be so close to a major intersection.

The council's reconsideration will send the plan back to the city's Planning Commission. The action will allow San Antonio Community Hospital to follow through with plans to develop its property at the northeast corner of Grove and Foothill into a convalescent home.

Without the council action, the hospital would be forced to pay $1,200 to file for an amendment to the Foothill Boulevard Specific Plan.

Because the road realignment was but a part of the overall Specific Plan, Stout said last week that the planning might not have received as much attention as it should have.

"If we focus on that one issue, I'm sure we could come up with something," Stout said.

When the plan first was proffered by the city's engineering department, the rerouting was presented as the best alternative to remedy the safety concerns caused by the way Red Hill sidles up to

Upland pay raise issue leaves city laborers upset

By Candysse Miller

Claims that Upland's recent labor negotiations have leveled city pay scales with other West Valley cities has raised the ire of the city's manual laborers, who claim that this equality ethic was not applied to their contract.

Pete Moreno, a janitor with the Upland Parks and Recreation Department and president of the Upland City Employees Association, bristled at the disclosure that the city's top officials earned pay hikes as high as nearly 17 percent while his counterparts were handed much smaller raises in last year's negotiations.

"Our employees have been at the low end of the pay scale for at least seven years, and we as negotiators have been telling them that all categories have been below average," Moreno said.

"They do the same soft-shoe routine: 'Times are hard. We can't afford to give you raises,' vet the city turns around and spends untold hundreds of thousands of dollars for upgrading equipment and other pet projects," he added.

City Manager Lee Travers said that it was the first time that he had heard of the complaint and would not comment on Moreno's allegations.

"All our employees have found over the years that management and council have been very responsive to their concerns," established grievance procedures. One of the early things you do if you have a concern is talk to your employer as opposed to talking to a newspaper.

Moreno said that he has contacted the city's Personnel Department to set a meeting with union representatives. He said that the pay issue will be a sticking point in future negotiation sessions

The city's announcement that they had agreed to sweeping pay hikes for administrative staff two weeks ago left general employes

"disheartened," Moreno said. Raises ranged from a low of 9.3 percent for the assistant city manager and the chief building official to a high of 16.7 percent for the fire chief.

Negotiators compared management staff's salaries with comparable positions in a dozen other nearby cities and found Upland's pay below average They used the study to help set the new administrative pay levels.

When the Upland City Employees Association signed their three-year contract last March, however, the city offered their union an immediate increase of 21/2 percent.

Members' salaries increased again by 2 percent in January and will increase by an additional 2 percent in July. The last year of the contract provides a 5 percent pay increase for union members.

In an effort to meet the growing food and nutritional needs of local low-income seniors, the disabled, the needy and the homeless, the Mt. Baldy Region of United Way Inc. has begun funding the food pantry of the San Bernardino County American Red Cross in Fontana.

'Though our food pantry has existed for the last five years it has become increasingly difficult to locate and maintain the resources to serve the ever increasing need for food baskets in the Fontana are," said Linda Zerbe, service center manager. Zerbe said "Thanks to a $9,200 allocation from the Mt. Baldy Region United Way we are now able to double the amount of food we distribute to the needy.'

According to Red Cross records the Fontana Red Cross Service Center recieves referrals from the Department of Social Services, area churches and the Salvation Army to provide food baskets to an averge of 40 households monthly. With United Way's funding, the Red Cross now is able to distribute food baskets to 80 families.

Developed by Juvenile Court Presiding Judge Patrick S. Morris, the program is a part of the Children's Network, a countywide program coordinating 14 social service departments and agencies that serve "at risk" children.

What is "at risk"?

"Those children who are physically or sexually abused," said Gaines.

The list also includes mental or emotional disturbance, as well as developmentally disabled, homeless, truant, or incorrigible children.

'The problem is that many of these children enter the county system as abused children, then follow a pattern of delinquency, and end up as adult criminals, said Gaines.

Through Gaines' efforts, the First Fund of Children's Resources has raised $300,000 in cash, goods and services this year. Participating donors include Stater Bros. Markets Anheuser Busch, Inc., the Coca-Cola Co. and Directors Mortgage, among others

According to Gaines, toppriority goods and services include everything from psychological counseling to toothbrushes and eyeglasses.

Among West Valley donors is Pomona optometrist William A. Bescoby, who volunteered the services of the Sun Belt Optometric Association to aid Gaines' cause.

"I'm trying to get the 100 members of the association to donate two eye examinations and two pairs of glasses a year," said Bescoby in a telephone interview.

The Sun Belt Optometric Association includes most of San Bernardino County, and portions of Los Angeles and Riverside counties.

Bescoby commented that in his view, the First Fund's major contribution was in providing self-esteem to kids who have never known that benefit.

"Also," said Bescoby, "I'd rather help these kids now than dollars when they're in prison."

According to Gaines, it costs an average of $30,000 a year to support a single prisoner in California.

Among the major projects accomplished by the First Fund is an 18-minute video titled 'America's Darkest Secret.'

Narrated by actor Ricardo Montalban, the video follows the actual case study of an abused child who grew up in San Bernardino County, and who now is serving a life sentence at

One participant appearing in that video was Adella Cook, a social worker with the county's Child Protective Services (CPS).

A CPS veteran of six years, Cook said that juvenile case loads in San Bernardino County have increased dramatically in recent years. She attributes the rise to a growing population, and to the fact that more people are aware of the problem of child

Upland educator Robert Nolan to step down

Junior high principal, councilman running for mayor in April election

By Natalie Shore

Longtime Upland educator Robert Nolan will step down as principal of Upland Junior High at the end of the current school

Also a city councilman who is running for mayor in Upland's April 12 election, Nolan, 59, announced his retirement to the school board last week.

'Our educational community supporter. He will surely be missed by all of us," said Frank Guzowski, school board

Though Nolan will leave his current post in September, he will remain with the district until Dec. 1 as director of adult education and child welfare and attendance. "I'll continue to do two are totally separate endeavors," Nolan said.

Nolan spent 29 years in Upland schools and the last 22 years as a junior high principal. He has educated an estimated 18,000 students, he said.

As a junior high prinicipal, Nolan developed a reputation for his self-described stringent dress and discipline codes.

"Mine is the only school in the county with dress code and discipline policy," he said.

Upland councilman resigns post on San Antonio board

By Candysse Miller

Frustrated at being blocked from debates on a controversial Upland development plan due to conflict of interest laws, Councilman Frank Carpenter announced last week that he would resign his board position with the San Antonio Liquidation

The conflict between his board and council jobs, and the proposed San Antonio Lakes community forced Carpenter to keep his mouth shut just when he needed to speak out most at election time.

"I've been chewing on it a long time, but I had to do a good deal of checking around to see if it's to the city's advantage if I was off (the board)," Carpenter said.

Carpenter's resignation was effective Monday.

The move, he said, would allow him to speak out on the controversial development plans during his mayoral election bid. When plans for the 1,500-unit planned community - the largest development ever proposed in Upland - came before the council in January, City Attorney Don Maroney told Carpenter that he could not discuss or vote on the plans because of his dual roles.

The order led to hours of frustration when Carpenter had to excuse himself from both council hearings and board discussions of the project.

"Ultimately I said, 'Wait. What good am I there? What good am I to the shareholders if I can't vote?' I'm responsible to the citizens of Upland, but I couldn't even vote," Carpenter explained.

"When this became very obvious to me was during the hearings when I said, 'Wait a minute, what I have to do is get off the land board."

He soon consulted Maroney about his options in his

"If he wants to vote on any of the zonings and general plans and other developments of the San Antonio lands, then he would have to disengage himself from the board," Maroney said, explaining his discussions with Carpenter.

But council and board discussions weren't the only factors convincing Carpenter to leave.

His election bid for the mayor's post and rumors that he owned stock in the trust rumors that Carpenter denies also convinced him to leave.

"I think the people need to know exactly where I stand," Carpenter said.

"I would rather go into the election able to comment (on San Antonio Lakes proposals) ... This way, I can respond. The way it was, if someone had asked me about it I would have to say 'I'm not allowed to discuss it' and drop it."

Fine instruments seen in harmonious exhibit

By Paula Monarez

Stringed instruments, their fine wood grain gleaming, line the walls of the gallery.

In the corner, lies the Veracruz harp. Long ago a Mariachi plucked the light-weight instrument, bringing about a sweet sound to a Southwestern

On the wall, near the entrance is a Dan-Bau. The unusual Vietnamese instrument has a single-string attached to a vertical pole.

And up encased on a shelf is the Banjerine. Born in 1910, it was the first attempt at making a banio without leather.

These three instruments and about 39 more can be found at the Museum of History and Art in Ontario.

They're all part of an exhibition called "Harmony," which opened Sunday.

The exhibition is regarded as one of the most impressive displays of stringed-instruments in the area, according to Kim Svenson, exhibit designer.

'They have been kept in such good condition," Svenson said. "And some of these instruments are worth $3,000."

The 42 musical instruments

"The collection is a music lovers' delight. They will go wild over some of these instruments."

represent the musical richness and diversity of the Southwestern states, particularly among the European, Mexican and Vietnamese cultures, according to a statement by Dan Wolf, curator of the exhibit.

"There are various guitars, harps, banjos and dulcimers, Svenson said. "And of course we also have the hybrids.'

The exhibition belongs to Charles and Dorothy Chase of the Folk Music Center and Museum in Claremont. The couple owns one of the most unusual collection of musical instruments around.

This musical exhibition is the first of its kind for the museum, said director Lou Ann Svenson.

"The collection is a music lovers' delight," she said. "They will go wild over some of these instruments."

The exhibition includes examples of instruments made by the classic American manufacturers, including Martin or Gibson.

"There is also a 1927 Washburn, which is a collector's item," said Kim Svenson. "It symbolizes the folk tradition."

Some of the more unusual instruments include a guitar made out of armadillo skin. which is used in a Mariachi band; a 1928 banjo-uke, which has the strings of a banjo and is the size of a ukulele; and the Tin-Thau, a 13-string psaltery related to the Chinese chung and Japanese koto and looks like a

In addition to examining the various instruments, the public will get a chance to play the harp

The museum is open from noon to 4 p.m. Thursday through Saturday. It is located at 225 S. Euclid Ave., Ontario.

Paul James Warren, son of Sibyl and Joseph W. Warren of Rancho Cucamonga has been awarded the degree of doctor of medicine by St. George's University School of Medicine, Grenada, West Indies.

Warren graduated last month at a ceremony at the United Nations in New York. The commencement speaker was Dr. Frederick A. King, director of the Regional Primate Research Center of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga. Warren was among 45 graduates who will soon be starting their hospital residencies.

W. Robert Finegan, director of public relations and alumni affairs at the College of Osteopathic Medicine of the Pacific (COMP) since 1979, is taking early retirement on March 31 to concentrate on freelance writing.

A former journalist and magazine editor and writer, he is the author of business biographies in the soon to be published book, "Pomona: A Centennial History," and an article on Pomona which is scheduled to appear in United Airlines' magazine "Vis a Vis," in the spring.

Finegan and his wife, Jill, librarian at Condit Elementary School, have three sons, Bill Mark and Roy. The family lives in Claremont.

Florence Beckley Wirt of Pilgrim Place, Claremont, recently celebrated her 100th birthday. Some 35 members of her family and close friends greeted her at the Pilgrim Place Medical Facility. The event was hosted by her daughter and son in law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rollins of Upland. Wirt was born in Somerville, New Jersey in 1888. Talented in music she became an accomplished pianist and organist at an early age. Moving West with her family to Pasadena in 1911, she became an organist at the First Methodist Church. In 1913 she married Charles Beckley of Cucamonga and lived in that community for thirty-eight years. She continued her musical career as teacher of piano and was organist at the Cucamonga Community Methodist Church.

In 1951 she married Dr. Loyal Lincoln Wirt and moved to Pilgrim Place, Claremont, where she has lived the past 37 years.

On Feb. 9 the Rev. Fred Gaglia of Sacred Heart parish in Etiwanda celebrated the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Gaglia was ordained on Feb. 9, 1963, at the Immaculata in San Diego.

In 1956 he graduated from Mt. Carmel High School in Denver. Gaglia served in education and administration for 22 years. He was involved in a number of major musical productions in Orange County during this time and received the prestigious Disneyland Community Service Award on several occasions for his outstanding direction.

Galia earned a bachelor of science degree from Loyola University in Chicago, a master of of science degree in biology and a masters of science degree in administration from the University of Notre Dame, and in 1985 a Ph.D. from the University of California.

... Cadet Raymond X. Sagui has been appointed to the superintendent's list for the fall semester at the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Placement on this list recognizes a cadet's high achievement in both academic and military training; maintaining a minimum of 3.5 grade point average and military performance average. This is the highest merit list a cadet can attain, especially noteworthy because less than 20 percent of the cadets reach this level of excellence.

Sagui is a sophmore and this is his third semester of earning such a distinction.
